Monthly Commentary

January began on a constructive note for credit markets, supported by improving U.S. data and resilient risk appetite. Retail sales, existing home sales, and ISM manufacturing signalled firmer growth, while the 10-year Treasury yield rose to 4.24%. A weaker dollar and stronger growth backdrop supported commodities, with WTI crude rebounding from $57 to $65 amid tensions in Iran, and gold reaching new highs. Late in the month, President Trump nominated Kevin Warsh to succeed Jerome Powell as Fed Chair in May. Warsh is widely viewed as relatively hawkish and policy-credible compared to other potential candidates, and the announcement helped stabilise the dollar into early February, tempering volatility across rate-sensitive markets.

Within USD corporates, performance was mixed across ratings, with BBs outperforming (+4.70 bps), while BBBs (-5.38 bps) and B-rated bonds (-8.60 bps) lagged. Sector dispersion was pronounced, led by Consumer Discretionary and Energy, followed by Communications and Industrials, while Technology was the clear underperformer, reflecting continued pressure on software and AI-sensitive names.

The Fund returned +1.46% in January, outperforming the Bloomberg Global High Yield Corporate Index (LG50TRUU, +0.97%) by 49 bps, and remains positioned for a supportive 2026 backdrop driven by gradual Fed easing and sustained demand for yield.

Risk and Reward Profile

Credit and Default Risk: A decline in the financial health of an issuer of a fixed income security can lead to an inability or unwillingness to repay a loan or meet a contractual obligation. This could cause the value of its bonds to depreciate.

Currency Risk: Changes in exchange rates may cause the value of investments to decrease or increase.

Liquidity Risk: Difficult market conditions could result in certain securities becoming hard to sell at a desired time and price.

Interest Rate Risk: Changes in interest rates will usually result in the values of bond and other debt instruments moving in the opposite direction (e.g., a rise in interest rates likely leads to fall in bond prices).
