Monthly Commentary

March was dominated by heightened geopolitical risk following the escalation of the Iran conflict and the effective disruption of shipping through the Strait of Hormuz, a key route for global energy supply. The resulting supply shock drove a sharp move higher in commodities, with WTI crude rising from $67 to above $100, while European natural gas and LNG prices increased materially. Higher energy prices also fed into inflation expectations and policy uncertainty, leading to a significant sell-off in rates markets, with the 5-year U.S. Treasury yield rising 44 bps to 3.94% and the 10-year yield up 38 bps to 4.31% over the month. Despite the risk-off backdrop, broader market sentiment remained supported by resilient U.S. growth expectations and the view that the conflict is likely to prove temporary rather than structurally disruptive.

Within USD corporates, BB spreads tightened (-19 bps), outperforming, while BBB spreads widened (+11 bps) and B-rated spreads widened sharply (+42 bps), reflecting pressure in lower-quality credit. Sector performance was led by Energy, while Consumer Discretionary lagged, followed by Communications, Industrials and Financials.

The Fund returned -0.79% in March, outperforming the Bloomberg Global High Yield Corporate Index (LG50TRUU, -2.10%). While markets were impacted by the Middle East conflict and higher energy prices, we believe high yield remains supported by resilient fundamentals and attractive carry. We continue to monitor potential energy disruptions from the conflict and stress in private credit markets for spillover risks.

Risk and Reward Profile

Credit and Default Risk: A decline in the financial health of an issuer of a fixed income security can lead to an inability or unwillingness to repay a loan or meet a contractual obligation. This could cause the value of its bonds to depreciate.

Currency Risk: Changes in exchange rates may cause the value of investments to decrease or increase.

Liquidity Risk: Difficult market conditions could result in certain securities becoming hard to sell at a desired time and price.

Interest Rate Risk: Changes in interest rates will usually result in the values of bond and other debt instruments moving in the opposite direction (e.g., a rise in interest rates likely leads to fall in bond prices).
